Love Bug virus wreaks havoc

A virus spread by mail messages titled 'ILOVEUMNO' has caused havoc in Malaysia after crippling the brains of more than 2,000 people in Kuala Lumpur and threatening the intelligence of millions more in the country. The virus first appeared in the early days of May, causing thousands of people to flock to hotels in Kuala Lumpur expecting envelopes of cash to be slipped under the doors of their hotel rooms. Once users open these envelopes, they are immediately contaminated by the virus, which then causes them to be spineless sycophantic idiots who clap and cheer wildly at any puerile utterance from the UMNO leadership.

The virus then spreads, causing victims to be transformed into lifeless zombies mumbling "I Love UMNO ... kini, sekarang dan selamanya" repeatedly for years on end. The virus spreads even more rapidly in enclosed areas such as the Putra World Trade Centre.

A more vicious hybrid of the virus, the 'ILOVEMAHATHIR' virus, can completely destroy every shred of a person's free will, integrity, self-respect and independent thought, causing victims to fall to their knees

UMNO committed to upholding democracy

The UMNO Elections this month clearly demonstrated UMNO's commitment to upholding democracy when the president, deputy president and youth chief of the movement were all re-elected unopposed. "This demonstrates that democracy is alive and strong in UMNO," said an UMNO delegate who refused to be named. "In fact, we have made democracy simpler to use – we give people the choice of only one person to vote for, so they don't have to make any difficult choices."

Another delegate who refused to be named added that the next General Assembly should probably dispense with all the time-wasting caused by elections and just declare Mahathir president for life, Abdullah Badawi deputy president for life and Hishammuddin Youth head for life. "That way, we can have more time during the Assembly to make droning speeches worshipping, idolizing and praising the party leadership."

'Nyah, nyah, nyah, nyah, nyah': Mahathir greets Tengku Razaleigh, on being re-elected UMNO President

Many of the motions tabled at the General Assembly by the delegates also reflected UMNO's strong stand on democracy. Among these were motions to fire civil servants who did not support UMNO; ban opposition newspapers; ban opposition parties; stop scholarships of students who did not support UMNO; recruit only civil servants who supported UMNO and award government projects and contracts only to UMNO supporters. "UMNO is clearly becoming more liberal, tolerant and open to criticism," the delegate mused. 'Frankly, I personally think all these Opposition trouble-makers should be blindfolded, handcuffed and beaten to a pulp by our Chief of Police. But that is not in our culture.'

Mahathir says he might retire ...again

Prime Minister Mahathir Mohamad this month announced that he might retire by the year 2003 – the latest in a long, predictable series of announcements of his impending retirement. Mahathir had earlier promised that he would retire after the Commonwealth Games in 1998. He then announced that he would retire after the Asian economic crisis was over. He then announced that he would retire as soon as he found a suitable deputy Prime Minister. Various other retirement announcements followed, the latest of which was when he announced the new Cabinet line-up last November.

Political analysts, however, speculated that the Prime Minister's retirement may come much later than most expect. "He had earlier indicated that he would not resign until a 'replica' of himself had been found," said an analyst who refused to be named. 'We may have to wait until the time when genetic cloning technology reaches the stage where that is achievable.'

Meanwhile, the Kuala Lumpur stock market did not react at all to Mahathir's announcement of his retirement plans, as no one believed him.

No rift with Daim, says Mahathir

Prime Minister Mahathir Mohamad this month denied speculation that Finance Minister Daim Zainuddin would resign due to a rift between the two. The recent appointment of a top financial advisor to Mahathir further fueled speculation that Daim was being eased out of office. Mahathir denied that there was a rift between them, saying they 'still smile and hug each other.'

Anwar was being eased out of office. Mahathir denied that there was a rift between them, saying "Do I have to kiss him on the street to prove there is no rift between us?"

Two years ago, Mahathir denied speculation that Finance Minister Anwar Ibrahim would resign due to a rift between the two. The appointment of Daim then as a top financial advisor to Mahathir further fueled speculation that

A political analyst who refused to be named said that it was evident the current rumours were unfounded. "Mahathir had said he'd kiss Anwar to prove there was no rift. With Daim, he only hugs him. The relationship has not reached kissing stage yet - this is a clear indication that Daim is still in favour."

Meanwhile, the Kuala Lumpur stock market reacted to Mahathir's denial by dipping 0.9 percentage points, as no one believed him.

Riot police disperse illegal assemblies

Just weeks after they were called to disperse illegal assemblies of Reformasi supporters commemorating last year's April 14th sentencing of Anwar Ibrahim, riot police were again called in to disperse illegal assemblies of UMNO delegates collecting big wads of cash to vote in this month's UMNO elections.

Prime Minister Mahathir Mohamad this month complained that delegates were arriving early in Kuala Lumpur many days before the UMNO Elections were to begin, hoping to receive cash from candidates contesting for party posts. He ordered delegates to leave Kuala Lumpur.

'It was evident that the delegates ignored the 'go home' order and refused to disperse, so we had to take action,' said a senior FRU officer who refused to be named. Water cannon attacked five-star hotel lobbies, discotheques and karaoke lounges across Kuala Lumpur, scattering wet delegates who left behind hundreds of unmarked brown envelopes full of hundred ringgit notes.

"The poor UMNO president has been crying his eyes out for the past three UMNO Elections telling these people not buy votes and they still keep on doing it," the officer said. "Stern action needed to be taken."

In a related development, hoteliers, karaoke lounge operators, disotheque owners and guest relations officers protested the 'go home' order, saying it was hurting business. "To prevent delegates from spending their hard-earned bribes is a flagrant abuse of their human rights," said guest relations officer Fanny Kwan as an UMNO delegate slipped a fifty ringgit note down her cleavage.

Police recover missing person abducted from newspaper

Police this month revealed that they had identified the mysterious person who went missing from a newspaper article in the Nanyang Siang Pau. Readers were mystified when the newspaper published an article on the "Ten Worst Enemies of the Press" but proceeded to name only nine individuals. The article highlighted nine individuals who were named by the Committee to Protect Journalists, including world leaders such as Yugoslavia's Slobodan Milosevic, Iran's Ayatollah Ali Khamenei, Cuba's Fidel Castro and China's Jiang Zemin.

However, the tenth person was not named and was suspected missing. Suspecting foul play, readers lodged a missing persons report with police.

"We initially suspected that the tenth person was among the hostages kidnapped from Sipadan," said a police spokesman who refused to be named. 'However, our investigations have revealed that the missing person is, in fact, safe and sound, and was last seen at the Putra World Trade Centre.'

So as not impede on-going investigations, he would not reveal the name of the missing tenth person, only hinting that the person is "a Prime Minister of Malaysia".

"We suspect that this is the work of foreigners jealous of our success who did not want yet another 'Malaysia Boleh' achievement highlighted to the world community," the spokesman speculated.

This is the second such incident involving missing persons from Chinese newspapers. Last year, Anwar Ibrahim went mysteriously missing from a picture of the UMNO leadership in the Sin Chew Jit Poh.

Police introduce innovative sex education programme

Police this month denied allegations of torture and cruelty, claiming that detainees were forced to perform sex shows for police guards as part of a new sex education programme for prisoners. The allegations emerged in the trial of Tenaganita director Irene Fernandez when witnesses testified that detainees were stripped naked and regularly forced to masturbate each other, perform oral sex and smear sperm on their faces while an audience of laughing and clapping policemen watched. Detainees who refused to perform the sexual acts were kicked and beaten, with one detainee dying from his wounds.

"We are disappointed that what we initiated as a useful sex education programme for detainees was misconstrued as torture and cruelty on our part," said a police spokesman who refused to be named. "We just wanted to highlight to prisoners the ills of masturbation and oral sex and the importance of moral values," he stressed as he pushed a Bangladeshi detainee's penis into a Burmese detainee's mouth. He added that the programme was painstakingly developed using techniques pioneered while extracting voluntary confessions from suspects in the Anwar Ibrahim police investigations.

He added that even UMNO was now conducting such education programmes for its members. "In 1998, the Prime Minister himself taught Malaysians about how to masturbate and insert penises into anuses in televised press conferences to Malaysians. And just this month, he was describing to delegates at the UMNO General Assembly how homosexuals 'depan, belakang, kiri, kanan pun boleh.'"

It was self-inflicted, says Sansui supporter

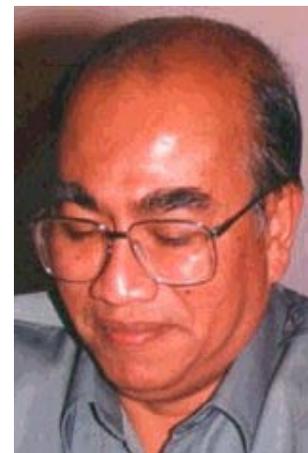

A supporter of Sanusi Junid said reports that two Malaysia Airlines staff were assaulted by the former Kedah Menteri Besar were slanderous lies and claimed that the wounds they suffered were actually self-inflicted. The supporter who refused to be named was commenting on the police report lodged by the MAS employees against Sanusi for allegedly slapping and kicking them at the KL International Airport this month.

"They were 'safe and sound' when Sanusi left the airport," the supporter claimed. 'I have no doubt their wounds were self-inflicted. Either that, or Sansui was provoked. I heard them call him a father of dogs just because he made some obscene hand gestures at them."

Police are investigating the assault and have called on the services of former police chief Rahim Noor to conduct an independent investigation.

From previous experience, even if convicted, it is not expected that Sanusi's jail term would exceed a couple of months.

UMNO committed to eradicating corruption

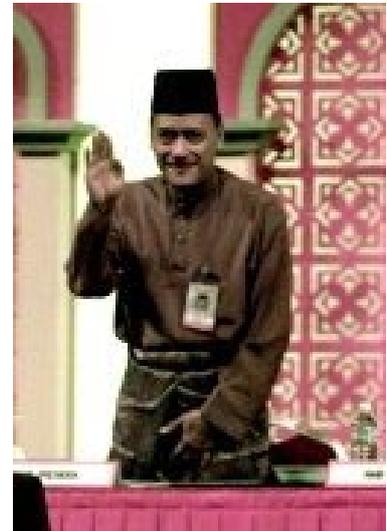

The UMNO Elections this month clearly demonstrated UMNO's commitment to eradicating corruption when Rafidah Aziz regained her position as UMNO Wanita Chief and former Selangor Chief Minister Muhammad Taib was elected an UMNO Vice President. An UMNO veteran who refused to be named praised the results. "When the delegates can elect someone who was investigated by the Anti-Corruption Agency for giving her son-in-law millions in shares and someone else who was caught overseas with millions in cash in his luggage, you can be assured that the new UMNO line-up is serious about combating corruption."

He added that the two new appointments also reflected UMNO's commitment to family values. "One was helping out her son-in-law, the other was helping out his brother. Foreigners out to re-colonise us may call it 'nepotism' – we prefer to call it 'family values'"

An UMNO spokesman said that he was pleased that UMNO delegates had forgiven Muhammad Taib for past mistakes. "After all, I'm sure we've all had excess baggage problems when we travel overseas. In fact, he only had 19 kilos of cash and we all know the baggage limit for international flights is 20 kilos."

He denied claims that Muhammad was celebrating his victory by going on holiday to Australia. He also denied rumours that Muhammad was eyeing the Foreign Ministry portfolio. "For one thing, he'd probably have to sit for an English test first."

UMNO committed to youth

UMNO Youth will strive to woo more young people into the movement "UMNO Youth has to make this effort and will target fifth formers who will become eligible voters by 2004," said newly-elected Youth head Hishammuddin Tun Hussein. "These students will be the three million new voters in the next general election," said an UMNO Youth delegate who refused to be named. "I don't think we can get away with not making them eligible to vote, like we did with the 680,000 new voters last year."

The delegate also supported Hishammuddin's call on the Youth and Sports Ministry to give emphasis to youth in its activities. "For example, UMNO Youth want the opportunity to organise its own successful parachute jumps over the South Pole. UMNO Youth Boleh!"

Hishammuddin also told delegates that "UMNO Youth is still bold and not toothless as alleged by some." To illustrate the point, he removed his dentures and showed delegates a fine set of molars that were still intact.

"UMNO Youth successes are due to the boldness of our past leaders," the delegate added. "And look what happened to our past two leaders!"

UMNO committed to scandalizing Anwar

UMNO clearly demonstrated it is still shit scared of Anwar Ibrahim when its President devoted more than 18 paragraphs to the man in his address to the delegates, continuing the fine UMNO tradition of scandalizing the man in public without him being present to defend himself. A more permanent feature of this noble tradition was added this year when a giant mural in the Putra World Trade Centre depicting the history of UMNO added a segment showing scenes of an angry Mahahtir next to newspapers announcing Anwar's sacking in September 1998.

An UMNO official who refused to be named said that a new mural will be added next year depicting Anwar being beaten to a pulp by former police Chief Rahim Noor, as well as scenes of Reformasi supporters being attacked by water cannon and beaten on the streets by riot police. "These are proud, noble moments in UMNO history which we want to record for posterity," the official said with tears of pride streaming in his eyes. "The new mural will also serve as a valuable lesson to future generations of UMNO leaders – U Must Not Object!"
